SUMMARY

Handan is a single mother of three, who works as a customer assistant at a luxury fashion boutique. Despite having a good job with a generous salary, it is left to her oldest daughter Derya to provide for the family, as Handan usually spends all her money on clothes, botox and cosmetics.

As she was young when she became pregnant with Derya, Handan feels like she missed out on a large part of her youth, so now that she has a good income she is desperate to play catch up, slavishly following celebrities and influencers on social media and trying to lead the life she wished she had.

Though she is extremely beautiful and doesn't have a problem attracting men, the ones with the fat wallets and jet set lifestyles that she craves tend to leave her once they discover she has kids.

SUMMARY CONT...

One day, when an important client needs a dress delivered, Handan takes it to her house. She is stunned by what she sees, and overcome with jealousy, as her client Zerrin is living the dream life that she feels she should have achieved by now; unimaginable wealth, a gorgeous home, handsome husband and beautiful kids. Yet despite the outward appearance of a happy marriage, Handan feels there is something off with Dündar, Zerrin's husband, and she is pretty sure he is flirting with her.

A few days later, at Zerrin and Dündar's wedding anniversary party, Handan's suspicions are confirmed as Dündar corners her, and kisses her. Stunned that he could act that way on his own wedding anniversary, Handan pulls away. But she can't help but be flattered and intrigued by the attention.

But she doesn't have time to reflect on what has happened, as Zerrin horrifies everyone at the party by pulling out a gun and killing herself in front of all her guests.

Handan's head starts to spin - did Zerrin see what happened? Is she to blame for letting Dündar kiss her?

HANDAN Hande Doğandemir

Single mother of three, in her late-30s. She gave birth to her eldest daughter at just 15. Handan lost her own mother so young that she can't even remember when. Her father worked as a teacher, who was regularly relocated around the country. When she was 14, they moved to a small village, where her father fell in love with a woman named Nedret. On the eve of their wedding, Handan's father and the rest of her family were killed in a car accident. Now an orphan, Handan moves in with Nedret, and her 19 year old son Engin.

Over time, Handan develops romantic feelings for Engin, and though they are young, the two fall deeply in love and start a family, eventually having three children. Then one day she receives a letter from Engin: "I'm young, I'm bored. There's a life outside. You can keep the kids."

Years pass by, and now Handan is now living in Istanbul with her three kids. She has a good job, but Handan never managed to grow up and it is her oldest daughter Derya that seems to be taking care of the household. DÜNDAR Kutsi

An attractive and successful businessman, Dündar is the ideal husband to Zerrin, and the beloved father of their three children, Selin, Pelin and Bora.

When, as a teenager, his mother dies, Dündar is not affected at all, and when his father also passes away in a tragic accident he shows no emotional reaction - he is growing up to be a sociopath.

When Dündar's biological mother Melek shows up and he sees the love in her eyes, he decides to keep her close by, employing her as a maid. Not because he feels any attachment himself, but because he knows that unconditional love can be the most powerful weapon when needed.

This calculated evil is completely unfamiliar to his children who love him dearly, but it is felt strongly, first by Zerrin, and in time will be a danger for his new wife, Handan.

Derya had a traumatic childhood and is the only one of Handan's children who remembers their father abandoning them. This has left her with major trust issues, while she also fears that one day she will turn into her mother.

This has left Derya so afraid of opening up to men, to the point that it has become a phobia. She never leaves her comfort zone and lets go of her feelings for any man - until she meets Bora, Dündar's son.

As the doctors said his mother's sickness might be genetic, he is scared that he or his kids might have the same condition, so he doesn't have a healthy relationship with women. He only has one night stands, and doesn't get deeply involved with anyone nor share his feelings with them.

He did have a girlfriend in high school that he was deeply in love with, Ada, but when the weight of Zerrin's illness became too much, he broke up with her. Ever since, he has been a closed book. So it takes him by surprise when years later, he finally finds himself getting close to a girl that unexpectedly arrives in his life - Derya.
